Farmers, foresters, ranchers and other professional livestock operators transport animals on ladders and on flatbed trailers towed by vehicles, for example, tractor-drawn trailers, and stock trailers pulled by single and tandem axle trucks. The animals are transported by unloading them at the loading dock of the livestock building, then moving them up and down a ramp, and then transporting them through a rear gate in the building. This process can be very time consuming and difficult for the operators. Some livestock operators use portable animal handling systems to unload animals from trailers. These devices can be motorized and have attachments for holding and moving animals between trailers and the livestock building. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 6,598,866 to Hett et al. discloses a carrier transport system in which a semi-truck pulls a trailer with an animal handling assembly mounted on the trailer. The carrier transport system is guided by a computer system that controls the movement of
